large. SUFFIX -cho. Although this suffix usually has its literal meaning, idiosyncratic examples are found, e.g. gadulekcho "devout Catholic", q.v., literally "big Catholic". It sometimes serves as a marker of masculine gender when attached to the name of an animal. Whether it indicates a large variety or a large individual is variable. When added to a person's name it may indicate that the person is large or the older member of two people with the same name, but it often indicates that the person is distinguished. The distinction may be as an individual, but there are cases in which the children of an important person all had this suffix attached to their names. When applied to living things, usually indicates a large one but in some cases designates a distinct but related species, e.g. datsancho "raven", q.v., but datsan "crow", q.v., and chunihcho "fisher", q.v., but chunih "marten", q.v.. This suffix follows the plural suffix -ne.
large. SUFFIX -ti. This suffix appears to be only marginally productive.

lesbian. N dich'oh k'un'a lhk'ehintsi'-ne. [recent coinage] This is a cover term for people with non-canonical sexual orientation and/or identity: homosexual, lesbian, transsexual, etc.
lesbian, she is a. V dune nadudil'i. [IA] [l-'i] lesbian, she is a. V ts'eke bulh nu'as. [IA–cont] [0-'as] Literally, "(s)he goes around with a woman", so has the meaning "she is lesbian" only when the subject is a woman. Although the subject is singular, as reflected by the lack of the third person duo-plural subject prefix h, the dual stem 'as rather than the singular stem ya is used because there are two participants in the activity.

male. N dune. Duoplural: dunene/001362 This word has two different senses. One is "human being, person", without regard to sex. This is seen in expressions such as dune nasdle' "(s)he came back to life", q.v., literally "(s)he became a person again", which may be said both of men and of women, and in compounds such as yoodune "medical doctor" and yunka dune "indigenous person", q.v., which may be either male or female. The other is "male animal", often implicitly, "male human being". This is seen in the many compounds specifying the male, e.g. tsilbayandune "male bald eagle", q.v., ndodune "male saint", q.v., and lhidune "male dog", q.v., and in contexts in which men and women are differentiated, in which case the men are dunene, q.v., and the women are ts'ekoo, q.v..

mode marker. PREFIX in-. some verbs, especially statives, explicitly mark the imperfective by the use of this prefix. it occupies the same slot as the inner subject prefixes, which take precedence over it. it therefore occurs only when there is no subject prefix at all (3d person singular) or when there is an outer subject prefix (1st person plural, third person dual/plural). the i appears only if it is preceded by another conjunct prefix. it therefore always appears in the 1p and 3dp, but only in the 3s if a non-subject conjunct prefix is present. This distribution is exemplified by the imperfective paradigs of "to be slender" where no prefix precedes the subject markers.

to travel by boat

	singular	dual	plural
1	usdot	idot	tsʼindot
2	indot	uhdot	uhdot
3	ndot	hindot	hindot

Compare ndot, where there is no preceding conjunct prefix, with dindot "it (d-class) is narrow", where the preceding conjunct prefix d permits the i to appear.

noble dog. N lhiza'. Poss: liza'. Duoplural: lhiza'-ne/069061 Refers to a dog trained to hunt bears or beavers. Such a dog is associated with bears or beavers as a puppy by having its face pushed into the carcass of a bear or beaver or by being scratched lightly on the nose with the claws of a bear.

noble in clan system. N duneza'. Duoplural: duneza'-ne/064767 Sometimes used for nobles of both sexes, this term is also used specifically for male nobles in contrast to ts'ekeza', q.v., "female noble". This word is spelled tneza in anthropological publications by Father Adrien-Gabriel Morice and in publications that use information originating with him.

optative mode marker. PREFIX o-. This prefix, which immediately precedes the inner subject prefixes, marks the optative mode. The main allomorph is oo. This allomorph is the result of fusion with the subject markers beginning with i, namely the 2s in- and the 1d id, e.g. toke' "let's us (2) go by boat".
optative mode marker. PREFIX oo-. This is both the principal allomorph and the underlying form of the marker of the optative mode, the use of which is complex but in general refers to events whose occurrence is uncertain. it immediately precedes the inner subject prefixes. it has the allomorph o- when it fuses with subject markers beginning with i, namely the 2s in- and the 1d id. Here is the paradigm of "to eat" in the optative:

	singular	dual	plural
1	oos'alh	ot'alh	ts'oo'alh
2	on'alh	ooh'alh	ooh'alh
3	oo'alh	hoo'alh	hoo'alh

notice the alternation between oo and o.

or. CONJ k'us 'ants'i.
or. CONJ kwala. This appears at the beginning of the consequent clause, whose verb must be optative. it is similar to whuch'a, q.v., except for the fact that the order of the two clauses is reversed.
or else. CONJ kwala. This appears at the beginning of the consequent clause, whose verb must be optative. it is similar to whuch'a, q.v., except for the fact that the order of the two clauses is reversed.

painfully. ADV 'ulhts'ulh 'ibulh.

pains x, it. V -lh'ults'ulh. [IA] [l-ts'ulh] This verb takes a comitative indirect object marking the person who aches or the part of the body that aches. it is therefore inflected by possessive prefixation of the object of the postposition -lh. if the object of -lh is the body part that hurts, it will be either generic bulh'ults'ulh or areal whulh'ults'ulh. if the body part is d-class, the generic indirect object prefix is used together with the d- gender prefix, e.g. bulh'udults'ulh. if the body part is round, the generic indirect object prefix is used together with the n- gender prefix, e.g. bulh'unults'ulh.

perfective affirmative. PREFIX s̲-. This conjunct prefix is the marker of one of the major types of perfective affirmative. it immediately precedes the inner subject marker. Here is a typical paradigm:

shoot [pa]

	singular	dual	plural
1	s̲usch'i	s̲ich'i	ts'uz̲ch'i
2	s̲inch'i	s̲ahch'i	s̲ahch'i
3	s̲uch'i	huz̲ch'i	huz̲ch'i

Notice that it has the allomorph z̲ in the first person plural and third person duo-plural. this is because these are conjunct prefixes. the allomorph z̲ appears in other person/number combinations as well if it is preceded by a conjunct prefix. for example, "I shot you (1)" is nyuz̲usch'i. the allomorph z̲ is triggered only by a preceding conjunct prefix, not by disjunct prefixes. notice how the disjunct prefix n= "in a loop" does not induce z̲.

go in a loop by boat [pa]

	singular	dual	plural
1	nus̲uski	nus̲iki	nuts'uz̲ki
2	nus̲inki	nus̲ahki	nus̲ahki
3	nus̲uki	nuhuz̲ki	nuhuz̲ki

the change of s̲ to z̲ after a conjunct prefix does not take place if it immediately precedes the d valence prefix. compare the paradigm of "shoot" above with the corresponding reflexive paradigm.

shoot self [pa]

	singular	dual	plural
1	naduz̲usch'i	naduz̲ich'i	nazdudus̲ch'i
2	naduz̲inch'i	naduz̲ahch'i	naduz̲ahch'i
3	nadudus̲ch'i	nahududus̲ch'i	nahududus̲ch'i

this prefix combines with the l valence prefix to form lh, e.g. nulhgai "he ran in a loop". it combines with the lh valence prefix to form lh, e.g. yulht'e "he roasted it".
perfective affirmative. PREFIX z̲-. This is the allomorph of s- that appears following a conjunct prefix when not immediately followed by any non-null valence prefix.

person. N dune. Duoplural: dunene/001362 This word has two different senses. One is "human being, person", without regard to sex. This is seen in expressions such as dune nasdle' "(s)he came back to life", q.v., literally "(s)he became a person again", which may be said both of men and of women, and in compounds such as yoodune "medical doctor" and yunka dune "indigenous person", q.v., which may be either male or female. The other is "male animal", often implicitly, "male human being". This is seen in the many compounds specifying the male, e.g. tsilbayandune "male bald eagle", q.v., ndodune "male saint", q.v., and lhidune "male dog", q.v., and in contexts in which men and women are differentiated, in which case the men are dunene, q.v., and the women are ts'ekoo, q.v..

progressive aspect marker. PREFIX i-. The progressive aspect indicates that motion is in progress toward a goal. for example, if someone is swimming around with no particular goal, the imperfective nube is used. if he or she is on the way from one point to another, the progressive ubilh is used. This position 3 prefix appears only when two conditions are satisfied. first, there must not be a position 2 subject marker (that is, a subject marker immediately preceding the verb base). this limits its occurrence to the first person plural and third person duo-plural, which are marked by outer subject prefixes, and the third person singular, which is marked by no subject prefix. second, it must be preceded by a conjunct prefix. therefore, it always appears in the first person plural and third person duo-plural, where the outer subject prefixes ts' and h provide the necessary conjunct prefix. in the third person singular it appears only when the verb contains a conjunct prefix. this distribution is exemplified by the progressive paradigms of "to travel by boat", where no prefix at all precedes the subject markers, and "to return by boat", where only the disjunct prefix na- precedes them.

compare ululh "it (generic) is floating", with no conjunct prefix, and dilulh "it (d-class) is floating", where the conjunct prefix d-, permits the -i- to appear. the preceding prefix must be a conjunct prefix; a disjunct prefix is not sufficient. thus, no -i- appears in forms such as 'oyalulh "it (generic) is floating by" and nadlulh "it (generic) is floating back".

steward of a territory. N keyoh hoontun-un. Duoplural: keyoh hoontun-ne/069169 Holder of a keyoh, q.v.
steward of territory. N keyoh whuduchun. The meaning of this term is a matter of dispute. It seems clearly to have referred originally to the steward of a territory. Some of those who give the primary role in traditional governance to the clans use this term for the most prominent clan leader, either an actual "head of all the clans" in the view of some, or a "first among equals" in the view of others.
stewards of territories. N keyoh hoontun-ne. Duoplural: 035253 stewards of territories. N keyohne. This is not a plural of keyoh, q.v. as it might seem but rather an abbreviation of keyoh hoontun-ne, q.v., or in some political contexts, a term meaning supporters of the role of the keyoh holders as opposed to the band or clans.

territory. N keyoh. The principal and traditional meaning is the area of which a certain group of people, basically an extended family group, are the stewards and in which they have the primary rights of usufruct. It is also applied to designate areas such as countries, settlements such as villages and towns, and seasonal sites such as trapping camps. It is also used to designate a trapline in the non-native sense, that is the area within which a certain person has the right to trap. However, "trapline" is misleading as a translation both in that it is not restricted to the right to trap and in that it is independent of the provincial system of trapline registration. Also, a non-native town as opposed to a reserve.

town. N tawn.
town. N keyoh. The principal and traditional meaning is the area of which a certain group of people, basically an extended family group, are the stewards and in which they have the primary rights of usufruct. It is also applied to designate areas such as countries, settlements such as villages and towns, and seasonal sites such as trapping camps. It is also used to designate a trapline in the non-native sense, that is the area within which a certain person has the right to trap. However, "trapline" is misleading as a translation both in that it is not restricted to the right to trap and in that it is independent of the provincial system of trapline registration. Also, a non-native town as opposed to a reserve.

track (of animal). N -k'oh. This is inalienably possessed in the sense that it must be used together with a possessive prefix. however, unlike body parts, ordinary (class 1) possessive forms are not restricted to reference to tracks made by the possessor. if, for example, someone excavates tracks in hardened mud and takes them away, he or she may refer to them as sk'oh "my tracks". The form one might expect by analogy to the alienable possession of body parts, se'uk'oh, is ungrammatical.

trapline. N keyoh. The principal and traditional meaning is the area of which a certain group of people, basically an extended family group, are the stewards and in which they have the primary rights of usufruct. It is also applied to designate areas such as countries, settlements such as villages and towns, and seasonal sites such as trapping camps. It is also used to designate a trapline in the non-native sense, that is the area within which a certain person has the right to trap. However, "trapline" is misleading as a translation both in that it is not restricted to the right to trap and in that it is independent of the provincial system of trapline registration. Also, a non-native town as opposed to a reserve.

village. N keyoh. The principal and traditional meaning is the area of which a certain group of people, basically an extended family group, are the stewards and in which they have the primary rights of usufruct. It is also applied to designate areas such as countries, settlements such as villages and towns, and seasonal sites such as trapping camps. It is also used to designate a trapline in the non-native sense, that is the area within which a certain person has the right to trap. However, "trapline" is misleading as a translation both in that it is not restricted to the right to trap and in that it is independent of the provincial system of trapline registration. Also, a non-native town as opposed to a reserve.

vocative prefix. PREFIX '-. This prefix is used to form vocatives of kinship terms. it usually has the allomorph 'u- due to epenthesis between the glottal stop and the initial consonant of the stem. With terms referring to generations higher than that of the speaker (not merely older than the speaker) it is also used as the first person singular possessor unless the possessor is contrasted. thus, 'uba means not only "someone's father" and "father!" but also "my father". if, however, it is desired to contrast one's own father with someone else's father, the regular first person singular possessed form sba is used.

goozih. In former times, a pejorative given name applied to someone who talks too much. Now an epithet for a gossip, or, in the case of a child, one who constantly runs here and there, visiting different people, keeping up on who is doing what. In this case its use is affectionate, not pejorative. This use extends to Carrier English where the word is even made into a verb: a child may be described as "goozih-ing around". (The final /h/ is not pronounced in English.) Some people also apply this term to the Steller's Jay, q.v..
